According to James post, I edited the footer as he suggested / admin/preferences/ selecting footer and adding the 'red letter' ADD YOUR LINK HERE.

Note: Going into the designers theme.html allows for editing all of the themes footer. Going through the admin panel does not.

Now, Wanting the same as XOOPS has I would copy their format. 1) right click on the link terms of service and see where it leads. for Terms of Service. 2) following their lead I would design mine somewhat like it. Go to your own terms of service page and copy the entire link. use that to build your link.

You can see an example of that with following the EDIT link on my main theme page and see how it was formed to take you directly to the area I wished you to go with that link.

I didn't care about having to go to the admin panel and all that jazz to edit one block so I added this feature,

<blockquote>

30" target="_blank">Easy EDIT: for this block.[color=990000]End user, you may leave a comment in the wiki portion of this forum.[/color] </blockquote>

Good luck ...
