I think everyone would welcome a new look without losing the knowledgebase. Fresh start + archive is good for me. If the current site can be updated without the need for an archive then that's great too.

I know there's a lot of politics involved, but I'm also hopeful that the x.o. management can find a way to collaborate better with the many other external sites. For example, xoops-end-user.com have a link to an archive of the module dev forge. It's not pretty, but it appears you can download (many) modules that are inaccessible from the forge since it was hacked. That should be front-page news here IMHO, at least until download links can be re-established to a new developer resource.
